Oakdale Library to host “Bach in the Classroom”

Free program at the library designed to inspire a love of classical music in children and their families

Music First, in partnership with the Oakdale Library, will host an introductory music program featuring composer Johann Sebastian Bach this month. The program, entitled “Bach in the Classroom,” is designed to help expose children and their families to classical music.

The event will be held on Thursday, Nov. 14 at 3 p.m. A presenter from Music First will bring a selection of instruments so children can learn how the sounds are made, in addition to helping them identify which instruments they are hearing in the music. All ages are welcome to attend.

"Because of the important role music plays in early literacy, music is a staple of library programs such as Story Time and Wiggle Worms," said Karina Mendoza, Oakdale Library supervisor. "“Bach in the Classroom” gives us an opportunity to further the benefit of music by offering a program that appeals to older children and their parents."

The Oakdale Library is located at 151 S. First Street. For more information regarding programs at the Oakdale Library, please contact Karina Mendoza at 209-847-4204.
